Recent commercial efforts in the general field have included the FX!32 project of Digital Equipment Corporation, the Crusoe project of Transmeta Corp., the Merced/Itanium project at Intel and Hewlett-Packard, the WABI project at Sun Microsystems, and projects at NexGen and Exponential Technology, Inc. The VAX 11/780 computer, introduced by Digital Equipment Corp. in the late 1970's, had some capability to execute programs for a first computer architecture on a computer of a second architecture. Since the early 1960's, IBM has offered emulation and simulation modes whereby its computers could execute program binaries for earlier IBM processors.

It is not believed that the capabilities of any of these prior computers relate to the inventions claimed in this application; nonetheless, the examiner's attention is drawn to these machines as possibly relevant prior art.

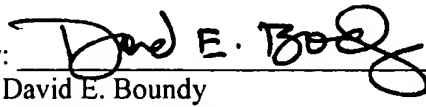

No fee is due for this Information Disclosure Statement since it is being filed in compliance with 37 C.F.R. §1.97(b)(3), to the knowledge of the undersigned, before the mailing date of a first Office Action on the merits.
